Nation reacts in horror after SC gunman kills 9

Church massacre.

The suspect, a young white male, is in custody after the shooting in a historically black church in South Carolina.

A 21-year-old white man suspected of killing nine people at a historic African-American church in Charleston, South Carolina, was arrested on Thursday after a traffic stop in Shelby, North Carolina, about 220 miles north of Charleston, said police chief Gregory Mullen.

Law enforcement officials arrested alleged gunman Dylann Storm Roof after a traffic stop in Shelby, North Carolina, about 220 miles north of Charleston, said police chief Gregory Mullen.

A witness told NBC that the gunman sat through nearly an hour of Bible study Wednesday night before saying, "I have to do it. You rape our women and you're taking over our country. And you have to go."

Mullen called the shooting "a tragic, heinous crime."

The mass shooting followed months of racially charged protests over the killings of unarmed black men, which has shaken the U.S.

U.S. Attorney General Loretta Lynch said her office was investigating whether to charge Roof

The suspect

What is known and what his family is saying about suspect Dylann Roof:

- His uncle, Carson Cowles worried he was cooped up in his room too much and too introverted. "I said he was like 19 years old, he still didn't have a job, a driver's license or anything like that and he just stayed in his room a lot of the time," Cowles said.
- The few images of him found easily online suggest he had a fascination with white supremacy. In one picture, he wears a black jacket that prominently features the flags of apartheid-era South Africa and Rhodesia, now Zimbabwe, from when the two African countries were ruled by the white minority.

- For his birthday this year, his father bought the young man a pistol.
- Those who know him described a withdrawn, troubled young man. Roof himself told a police officer who was arresting him earlier this year for illegal possession of prescription painkillers that his parents were pressuring him to get a job.

Quoted

"I don't have any words for it. Nobody in my family had seen anything like this coming."

Carson Cowles, 56, the suspect's uncle with a hate crime motivated by racial or other prejudice. Such crimes typically carry harsher penalties.

"The fact that this took place in a black church obviously raises questions about a dark part of our history," President Barack Obama told reporters.

"We don't have all the facts," he said, "but we know that, once again, innocent people were killed in part because someone who wanted to inflict harm had no trouble getting their hands on a gun."

The Southern Poverty Law Center, which researches U.S. hate groups, said the attack illustrates the dangers that homegrown extremists pose.

"Since 9/11, our country has been fixated on the threat of jihadi terrorism. But the horrific tragedy at the Emanuel AME reminds us that the threat of homegrown domestic terrorism is very real," the group said in a statement.

Condolences. New York mourns Charlestown victims

With the capture of Dylann Roof, the man accused of opening fire and killing nine people and injuring three inside a black church, comes the long and painful healing process.

Dozens of mourners came together Thursday night in Union Square in honor of those killed in Wednesday's shooting spree.

"I hope these gatherings ignite in people the commitment to do this work long term," said Linda Sarsour of New York Justice League who attended Thursday's vigil. "This isn't a one time vigil. You need to be committed to ending racism particularly against black sisters and brothers. You got to be in it 100% and ask yourself: What am I willing to risk?" LENYON WHITAKER

Did I mention the $59 price tag? This is a LOT of machine for not a lot of money. The Stauer Centurion Hybrid sports a heavy-duty alloy body, chromed and detailed with a rotating bezel that allows you to track time and speed. The luminous hour and minute hands mean you can keep working into the night. And the dual digital displays give this watch a hybrid ability. # Mayor puts brakes on park traffic

Banned. Mayor Bill de Blasio says weekday traffic closures will make park-goers safer.

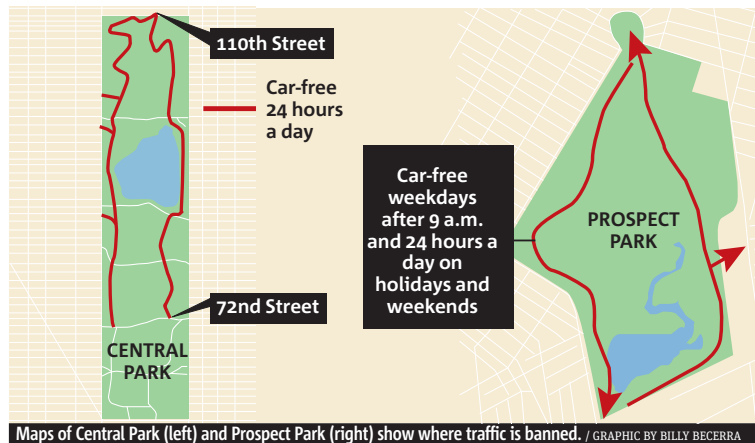

Central and Prospect parks will soon have a lot fewer cars going through it.

Mayor Bill de Blasio announced Thursday morning that vehicle traffic will be banned from the Central Park loop north of 72nd Street starting June 29, and from Prospect Park's West Drive starting on July 6.

"This makes the majority of both parks car-free," de Blasio said.

De Blasio said up to 200 cars pass through Prospect Park during the evening rush hour, when more families are visiting the parks after schools and work.

Cars were first allowed in city parks in 1899, and the mayor said that city parks haven't been this car free in 116 years.

Quoted

"[Prospect Park] was our front yard, our back yard for so much of our life. And I think for so many New Yorkers, that's the common experience."

De Blasio

When asked why the city didn't ban all traffic within the two parks, New York City Department of Transportation Commissioner Polly Trottenberg said Central Park "still has a very high car volume" — 400 to 500 cars an hour — and the city is concerned of the spillover traffic into the already-congested parts of midtown.

Trottenberg said the city successfully closed the Central Park drives north of the park the last two summers without issue.

"I'm very happy with Prospect Park ... it's a great big step," said Brooklyn runner Michael Ring, who started a petition to ban all traffic in the park earlier this year. "But in Central Park, they're leaving cars among the most dangerous areas, where the horses go, runners, bicyclists. Taxis have to go around horses in the bike lane."

Multiple people Metro spoke with in Central Park on Thursday agreed with the ban, with some also commiserating with drivers, who will now need to drive below 72nd Street or up and around the park to get across.

Beresford Simmons, a member and organizer with New York Taxi Workers Alliance, called the move a "major inconvenience" for cab drivers, and said drivers should have been surveyed before the move.

"This is costing the passengers quite a lot of money, costing businessmen who need to get from one point to another a lot of time and is costing New York City a lot of money," Simmons said.

Man fatally shot after stabbing cop

A police officer shot and killed a man in Coney Island after the assailant stabbed the transit cop in the head and shoulder with an 12-inch hunting knife.

The incident happened around 1:17 p.m. in the street below the elevated Q line at Ocean Parkway. Police Commissioner Bill Bratton said the officer was on the Q platform when he heard a man arguing with an elderly woman in the street below. When the officer went over, the man pulled a knife and stabbed the cop, who then fired two rounds at the man. The man, 58, was pronounced dead at the scene, and responding officers recovered the knife, police said.

The officer was taken to Lutheran Hospital with head and shoulder injuries. Doctors said at a press conference the wound was superficial and the officer just needed stitches. METRO

Activists, UN celebrate pope's call to arms on global climate change

"The Vatican has evaluated the scientific evidence for climate change and decided that the world must act to avoid the devastation of our life supporting ecosystem," said Mark Maslin, professor of climatology at University College London. / GETTY IMAGES

Environment.

Experts agreed the pope had shifted the debate into a higher gear.

Pope Francis' appeal to save the planet won enthusiastic praise from climate change activists, scientists and religious figures on Thursday as a moral imperative to governments to make 2015 a turning point in efforts to slow global warming.

In the first papal document, or encyclical, dedicated to the environment, Pope Francis demanded swift action to head off what he saw as looming environmental ruin, and urged the world's leaders to hear "the cry of the earth and the cry of the poor".

He called for "decisive action, here and now" to stop environmental degradation and global warming, squarely backing scientists who say it is mostly man-made.

Activists and scientists celebrated the intervention as bringing a moral element to the political controversy over climate change, which some conservative politicians and business executives — especially in the U.S. — doubt has been caused by human activity.

"Climate change is no longer just a scientific issue; it is increasingly a moral and ethical one," said Yolanda Kakabadse, president of the WWF international conservation group.

Christiana Figueres, head of the Bonn-based U.N. Climate Change Secretariat, said the encyclical provided a powerful impetus to governments to agree to a strong pact when they meet in Paris from Nov. 30 to Dec. 11.

"This clarion call should guide the world toward a strong and durable universal climate agreement in Paris at the end of this year," Figueres said in a statement. REUTERS

New $20 bill. Will Harriet Tubman ever replace Andrew Jackson?

Women On 20s has announced that Americans have voted for Harriet Tubman to replace Andrew Jackson on the $20 bill.

Women On 20s described the abolitionist and humanitarian as "Herculean" in an extended biography that captures the accomplishments and importance of Tubman to American history.

Considered by many the Moses of her time, escaped slave Tubman became one of the country's leading abolitionists before the Civil War. She returned to the South an estimated 19 times to rescue her family and others from bondage as a "conductor" on what was known as the Underground Railroad, an elaborate secret network of safe houses leading to freedom in the North. Later, with her intimate knowledge of the geography and transportation systems of the South, she became a valuable asset to the Union army as a spy and scout. Her Herculean accomplishments were attributed to extraordinary courage, shrewdness and determination. The Quaker Thomas Garrett said of her,

"If she had been a white woman, she would have been heralded as the greatest woman of her age."

The organization has for the last several months been asking people to visit their website to vote for which American woman should be the face of the most-used bill in U.S. currency.

A little more than 600,000 people voted, and more than a million votes were cast in several rounds of what must have been a very tight race. See all the results here.

Authorities arrest 243 people in $712 million Medicare fraud

The U.S. Department of Justice said that 243 people have been arrested across the country, charged with submitting fake billing for Medicare, a government health care program, that totaled $712 million.

U.S. Attorney General Loretta Lynch described the arrests as the largest criminal health care fraud takedown in the history of the Justice Department.

Those arrested included 46 doctors, nurses and other licensed medical professionals. The charges are based on a variety of alleged fraud schemes, the government said, including submitting claims to Medicare and Medicaid, the health care program for low-income individuals, for treatments that were medically unnecessary and often never provided.

The nationwide sweep, led by the Medicare Fraud Strike Force and the U.S. Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services, involved about 900 law enforcement officials. It's the largest both in terms of the number of those charged and the amount of money lost.

Many of the arrests were in Florida, long an epicenter of Medicare fraud. REUTERS

Crews battle wildfires raging across California, Alaska and Arizona

Wildfires raging in three West Coast states have forced more than 1,000 people to be evacuated from their homes this week in blazes that mark an early start to what experts say may be a particularly destructive fire season.

The fires have already consumed more than 100 structures in Alaska, and were threatening others in drought-hit California and Arizona. In Oregon, officials imposed new 12-county restrictions on the use of flammables such as fireworks. REUTERS

The U.S. Supreme Court on Thursday ruled that Texas did not violate free speech rights when it rejected a proposed specialty vehicle license plate displaying the Confederate flag, to some an emblem of Southern pride and to others a symbol of racism.

The 5-4 ruling will give states that issue specialty license plates wide latitude to decide which ones to approve. The court's four liberals were joined in the decision by conservative Clarence Thomas. REUTERS

Tropical Depression Bill lashes central US states

Tropical Depression Bill pelted Oklahoma with heavy rains, triggering flooding that killed a 2-year-old toddler who was swept out of his father's arms by raging waters, officials said on Thursday.

One person in neighboring Missouri was killed by flooding caused by rains from the storm hitting the region and a woman died in central Texas when she lost control of her car while driving through the storm, officials said.

Bill, the second named tropical storm of the 2015

Atlantic hurricane season, is expected to dump between 2 to 4 inches of rain as it travels northeast through Arkansas and Missouri into West Virginia.

Some areas could see as much as 12 inches, the National Weather Service said. It has issued a flash flood watch stretching from the Texas Coast into Illinois. REUTERS

Your official summer reading list

From the upcoming big releases everyone is taking about to smart indie hits, we highlight the best of the best.

EMILY LAURENCE
@EmLaurence
emily.laurence@metro.us

Lazy days in the shade with a good book are one of summer's great pleasures, but in order to indulge, you have to decide what to read first. Whether you're looking for romance, suspense or to be transported across the globe, these are the books that will do the trick.

FICTION

"Go Set A Watchman" by Harper Lee (out July 14) Harper Lee shocked book lovers everywhere when she announced she just so happened to have an unpublished sequel to "To Kill a Mockingbird." The book features a now grown-up Scout who is returning home to visit her father, Atticus.

"Eight Hundred Grapes" by Laura Dave (out now) When Georgia's fiancé reveals a shocking secret just days before their wedding, she flees home to California, where her family owns a winery. There, she learns that her parents are splitting up and selling the estate. Pour yourself a glass of rosé and settle in.

"Killing Monica" by Candace Bushnell (out June 23) "Sex & The City" fans rejoice: The author is back with another juicy novel. This one is about a writer living in New York City (yes, really) whose books about a man-eater named Monica have become blockbuster hits. Newly divorced, she's on a mission to reinvent herself, which includes killing the franchise.

"The Underwriting" by Michelle Miller (out now) Chapters alternate between several characters in this addictive novel about sex, greed and the dueling worlds of Wall Street versus Silicon Valley. Six 20-somethings are primed to make millions thanks to a crazy popular dating app, but success comes at a price.

"Under Fire" by Tom Clancy (out now) Though Tom Clancy passed away in 2013, his suspenseful franchise lives on, thanks to co-author Grant Blackwood. This book follows the president's son, who sets out on a heart-pounding mission after an old friend delivers him a cryptic message.

"The Ultimatum" by Dick Wolf (out now) "Law & Order" creator Dick Wolf's new novel is about a detective tasked with hunting down a serial sniper who uses drone technology. The mystery novel will keep you guessing until the end.

"Summerlong" by Dean Bakopoulos (out now) "Summerlong" is both smart and satisfying. Don and Claire are college sweethearts living in a sleepy Midwestern town. But three children later, their marriage is in trouble and the young coeds they have both

"H is for Hawk" by Helen Macdonald (out now) "Helen Macdonald grapples with the death of her father by taking on the challenge of training a goshawk in one of the year's most devastating and cathartic memoirs. This best-selling new release is available on Oyster Unlimited."

separately met sure aren't helping things.

"Land Where I Flee" by Prajwal Parajuly (out now) Prajwal Parajuly takes readers on a journey halfway across the world to India where Chitrlekha is celebrating her 84th birthday, a landmark cultural event. Her grandchildren have traveled from their various homes in other countries to come celebrate and, of course, you know when family gets together, drama always ensues.

"Alexandrian Summer" by Yitzhak Goren (out now) Originally published in 1978 — but now translated into English for the first time — this novel focuses on two feuding Egyptian Jewish families. Set in 1951, it exposes sexual hypocrisies of the upper-middle class while hooking the readers in with a dramatic storyline.

Top picks from Oyster

Seeing as how the most common time to read is while commuting to and from work, we asked Kevin Nguyen, the editorial director at Oyster (known as the "Netflix for books"), which three new releases he's most excited about. He shares his picks below:

"Palace of Treason" by Jason Matthews (out now) "There's nothing better than a star-crossed Russian operative and a CIA agent for keeping you completely engrossed on a flight, beach or your hot summer subway ride. This follow-up to the best-selling 2013 thriller 'Red Sparrow' might even make you wish you had more stops so you could squeeze in a few extra pages."

"In the Unlikely Event" by Judy Blume (out now) "For readers who grew up with the classic 'Are You There God? It's Me, Margaret,' Judy Blume's new adult novel brings Blume's signature style together with an intricate multigenerational story about how people deal with love and loss."

"Circling The Sun" by Paula McLain (out July 28) "The Paris Wife" author Paula McLain returns with "Circling The Sun," set in 1920s Kenya. Beryl is a young woman, both bohemian and bold, who conquers everything from racehorse training to commercial piloting. The only thing she can't seem to control is her heart.

Butler spills about his 10 years as a journalist in Cuba, largely covering the boxing scene. Even if you're not a fan of the sport, you'll be mesmerized by this up close look at Cuban culture.

"I Like You Just the Way I Am" by Jenny Mollen (out now) Actress Jenny Mollen wrote this laugh-out-loud book with R-rated stories from her personal life, including hiring a prostitute for her husband Jason Biggs' birthday. Expect your fellow commuters to lean over your shoulder to see what you're cackling at.

"Local Girls" by Caroline Zancan (out June 30) Caroline Zancan gifts us the friendship novel of the summer with this page-turner about four best friends, all 19 years old, and a hot movie star who shows up to their quiet Florida town.

MEMOIRS

"The Domino Diaries" by Brin-Jonathan Butler (out now) Journalist Brin-Jonathan

"Twisted: My Dreadlock Chronicles" by Bert Ashe (out now) Writer Bert Ashe chronicles his quest to grow dreadlocks while giving a cultural history of the hairstyle, from its origination in Jamaica to making its way to the States. His is a welcome, fresh voice, starting a conversation about black culture from a fun angle.

'Infinitely Polar Bear'

Director: Maya Forbes
Stars: Mark Ruffalo, Zoe Saldana
Rating: R

• • • • •

It probably doesn't look it, but the annoying title of "Infinitely Polar Bear" secretly tells you how good it is. It comes from one of the film's two young children learning that her father, played by Mark Ruffalo, has been diagnosed with bipolar disorder. She hears it as a variation on "polar bear." It's a sign that the film that tells her family's story — based on the experiences of its writer-director, Maya Forbes — will deal in a goofy (but no less strong) form of resilience. This should be a grim tale; it could have also gone into full-on, misjudged quirk. Instead, it lies somewhere in between — a little too upbeat at times, but always perched over despair.

 SONY PICTURES CLASSICS

The plot finds Ruffalo's Cam having to care for his kids on his lonesome after mom (Zoe Saldana) goes off to school, and not doing a great job of it. As Ruffalo plays him, Cam is a big child himself, unable to control his emotions and most alert when he has an excuse to unleash his boyish exuberance. Ruffalo still reins him in just enough that his performance, and the film, doesn't just become a silly lark with no consequences. The film feels levelheaded, even when an upset Cam is giving his two young daughters the double middle finger. MP

'Eden'

Director: Mia Hansen-Love
Stars: Felix de Givry, Pauline Etienne

• • • • •

There's a lot of good times and bad in "Eden," which traces the life of Paul (Felix de Givry), a French EDM DJ, from 1992 to the present. But whatever the mood there's a nagging sense that the euphoric and the melancholic are inextricably intertwined. Raging club scenes are shot, by director Mia Hansen-Love ("Goodbye First Love"), with handheld detachment rather than slick on-the-beat editing that marked EDM scenes in the likes of "Go" or "Groove." Even when characters are getting lost in pulsating tunes that drone on into infinity, the filmmaking is always bringing them down to earth.

"Eden" isn't really about music. It's a slow-motion study of early obsolescence and time

destroying all. It's an intimate study of Paul, a key practitioner in "French touch," the soul-and-beats scene that birthed Daft Punk (who are supporting characters). Paul gets so caught up in spinning and making records that he doesn't notice the years flying by. Nor can he tell when his very specific brand of music gradually goes out of fashion, eventually leaving him stranded and pushing 40. He barely ages; de Givry plays him over 20-plus years and he still looks basically the same — a Dorian Gray with increasingly sad eyes.

This sounds like a bummer, and it is. What helps take the edge off and make it bearable is, first, the music, then the purely observational direction. Hansen-Love's style is close to Olivier Assayas ("Clouds of Sils Maria"), which makes sense as they're married. But her approach is, if anything, more detached than Assayas', though also more furtively emotional. Paul is a quiet guy to trail over a two-hour-plus movie, yet his reticence doesn't make his plight blandly universal. "Eden" is a fairly specific ballad in a minor key for the type of person who didn't take the prescribed life route, who didn't pair off and settle down, who didn't adapt as he should have, who kept at a dream for so long that the scene itself eroded away, sprinkling, atom by atom, into oblivion. At the same time, he can say he really lived.

'The Overnight'

Director: Patrick Brice
Stars: Taylor Schilling, Adam Scott

You might think you know where "The Overnight" is going. A normal married couple — Emily and Alex (Taylor Schilling and Adam Scott) — spend an evening with Kurt and Charlotte (Jason Schwartzman and Judith Godreche), a weirdo married couple. They are thus primed to learn a valuable lesson in conformity and not straying far outside prescribed norms. But that's not what happens in

"The Overnight." Instead, Patrick Brice's four-actor chamber comedy not only goes in a different direction entirely but takes the very idea of heteronormativity as its subject. Sometimes Emily and Alex are turned off by Kurt and Charlotte's free-spiritedness; other times they surprise even themselves with how willing they are to see how far afield their boundaries lie.

This is an idea explored in "Humpday," which starred "The Overnight" producer Mark Duplass. This one is debatably even more willing to push things, and to push things while staying funny. There's a midfilm set piece involving a certain dance designed to encourage theaterwide howls. But the sequence doesn't do what most films like it do and crawl back at the end to a more comfortable position. Comedies that vie for edge tend to wind up revealing their secret, sometimes unconscious conservatism. "Knocked

Up" is a raunchy, dirty comedy that preaches family first. "The Overnight," meanwhile, is a sometimes dirty comedy that sincerely and wittily explores the anxieties that involve adopting genuinely progressive lifestyle choices. MP

‘Inside Out’ will make adults cry approximately 100,000 times

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

Set inside the mind of an 11-year-old girl, the latest from Pixar hangs with five emotions duking it out for control. When two of them — Joy (voice of Amy Poehler) and Sadness (Phyllis Smith) — accidentally wind up in a remote part of her brain, the little girl spirals into a preadolescent depression from which she may never escape.

The lowdown: At their best, no one is better than Pixar at bridging the gap between children and adults. They make films that work on one level for kids, and another for the people who brought them to the movies. So “Inside Out,” their 15th feature, is an odd duck: It’s an animated film that is more or less exclusively for adults. It’s such a devastating look at the death of childhood that it’s not clear what very, very young viewers will get out of it, if anything. There are pretty colors and fuzzy characters often doing wacky things.

There’s a funny imaginary friend (Richard Kind) who is part talking elephant, part dolphin. But even he gets bottomlessly sad.

There are a lot of jokes and clever ideas, plus hilarious journeys to the subconscious and, best of all, the area for abstract thought. But on the flipside of every gag lies overwhelming sadness. Like most toons, “Inside Out” has a homily, only it’s not a comforting one, though it is one that is genuinely sage. It’s also a bummer, but a beautiful bummer. Pixar director Pete Docter previously made “Up,” and “Inside Out” plays like that film’s opening true love montage stretched, with no shortage of awe-inspiring sadism, to feature length.

Shameik Moore, with Tony Revolori and Kiersey Clemons in the background, plays an Inglewood teen who gets involved with a drug fiasco in the comedy “Dope.” OPEN ROAD FILMS

‘Dope’

“Dope” is a disarmingly fun-loving update on, of all things, the 1990s rash of grim hood movies, like “Boyz n the Hood,” “Juice” and “South Central.” Its hero is a geek: Inglewood teen Malcolm (Shameik Moore) loves ‘90s hip-hop so much he dresses like it’s 1991 and even sports a hi-top fade. He gets involved in exactly the kind of tragedy once played for drama, namely an MDMA fiasco involving a local dealer (A$AP Rocky). The only thing is it’s played as raucous, goofy comedy. Malcolm’s life and those of his equally dorky friends (Tony Revolori and Kiersey Clemons) and whoever else accidentally gets involved are routinely in danger, but the tone stays resolutely upbeat and zany, even while acknowledging that this is, minus things like a public urination gag, all too real.

Indeed, “Dope” has a lot on its mind — a lot of grievances and satirical jabs it can’t resist throwing out there. It finds room for digs at white kids who want nothing more than to drop the n-word. It even has a diss on Starbucks that’s almost as dated as the records Malcolm adores. All along “Dope” sticks to its comedic tone, but the jokes have real force and real anger underneath them. It’s not as sharp as the superficially similar “Dear White People,” but that’s because it trades some edge for populist thrills — but only some edge. MP

Tony Revolori first earned attention for playing the lovelorn Lobby Boy in "The Grand Budapest Hotel." His latest, "Dope," finds him in a far different location as one of three nerdy outcasts in South Central L.A.

What was your conception of South Central before you this?

I mean, I've been to South Central. I have friends who live there. But I had no thoughts. I knew what the place was, I knew how it goes, but it's not something anyone ever talks about. It's great to see that people are able to know about this place. Like, I went to Cannes and people were like, "Is this a real place?"

How about some L.A. and New York comparisons?

I'm going to go to New York very soon to do a play called "Mercury Fur." I'm scared of New York. I'm super-scared of the subway system. Like, I'm going to fall asleep and wake up at the end of the line and there's going to be a clown with a knife and he's just going to murder me. Which should be a horror movie.

I would go see "Murder Clown."

Or how about "Subway Clown"? Jared from Subway could play the clown. This is gold! The s— writes itself.

Do you find yourself getting recognized a lot for "The Grand Budapest Hotel"?

Yeah, pretty much that's the only thing I get recognized for. I got this one aggressive girl today on Instagram. She commented on every single one of my pictures — like, "I love you," "Marry me," "Follow me." I posted a picture from my birthday of me Titanic-ing my brother, and she said the weirdest thing. I was like, "What the hell? What is going on here? This is not OK. Someone save me now."

"True Detective" premieres this Sunday at 9 p.m. on HBO. LACEY TERRELL, HBO

Five things to expect from the new season of "True Detective"

While there have been plenty of feverishly anticipated TV shows returning this year, the second season of "True Detective" might have had the heaviest expectations placed on it. The first season — which benefited from what we've all come to know as the McConaissance (Matthew McConaughey's series of indelible performances) — was an intense, philosophical take on the buddy cop formula. The new season, with an entirely new cast, new location and new crime, has some big shoes to fill. Say goodbye to the flashback structure, and say hello to an obsession with the ways people have sex, think about sex and plan to have sex. Here's what else you can expect.

1 Heading west. Instead of the first season's Louisiana locale, the show is set in sunny, dissipated Vinci, California. It's a city of few residents, toxic pollution and a whole lot of corruption. The ostensible crime that occurs (the murder of a city manager) is only a tiny pawn in the battle between the various individuals and groups trying to get a piece of the pie, and the potentially cleaner government officials striving to investigate them.

2 There are women now. Creator Nic Pizzolatto seems to have listened to the criticism about the first season's lack of three-dimensional female characters. This time through, McAdams plays as big a role as the men, though it's worth noting that she and Michelle Monaghan, Season 1's female lead, both make their first appearances onscreen in their underwear. McAdams is the quintessential tough, gritty cop, marooned in a sea of men who seem fated to disappoint her and earn a withering side eye.

3 A dark, wicked sense of humor. There are jokes, though don't expect many from Vince Vaughn, the ostensible comedian of the bunch. He's stuck with the more philosophical lines this season, but struggles with them more than McConaughey did. But there are plenty of throwaway lines that have the cadence and appearance of jokes, despite the fact that no one here seems willing to crack a smile. Instead, they're more often greeted by a sardonic look from one of the four leads — Vaughn, along with Farrell, Rachel McAdams and Taylor Kitsch as the trio of cops set at cross purposes to investigate the murder and each other. Meg Mac, a soulful voice from Melbourne, Australia, has rocked the stage at SXSW and been compared to Adele — and she hasn't even released a full-length album yet. making waves stateside while on tour with R&B singer D'Angelo.

What's it like touring with D'Angelo?

I feel very lucky and I have no idea how I get to do this. When I was told that I might get to tour with him, I was like, "Oh yeah, that'll never happen!" It's crazy.

What was the inspiration behind your single "Roll Up Your Sleeves?"

At first I was writing it almost as a letter to myself to let me know that everything is going to be all right. Because when I'm feeling upset, I tend to stay in my own shell and not let people help me. I felt so much better after I wrote it and every time I sing it I feel really good.

"Roll Up Your Sleeves" is featured in a promo for "The Astronaut Wives Club" on ABC.

What's it like having your song featured in a TV spot?

It was pretty cool, but it's really weird [to watch].

It's cool to see a different interpretation of your song because when you're writing it you never think that it would be used for something like that. But I feel like it matches perfectly.

Who are some of your favorite artists and inspirations?

Sam Cooke is my favorite. At the moment I'm pretty obsessed with Hiatus Kaiyote, a band from Australia.

Who was your first celebrity crush?

I used to [imagine] I was Anastasia from the Disney movie and I loved Dimitri.

What's your biggest onstage blunder so far?

I've said the dumbest stuff in between songs, making a fool of myself. When I was doing a festival tour in Australia there was one show in a town called Adelaide, but I was at a different show in another town. My best friend named Adelaide was in the audience, so I was like "Hi Adelaide!" and everyone thought that I thought I was in Adelaide and got a bit mad.

Creating a community for musicians

Liliana Conde of M.A.K.U. Soundsystem tells us why musicians love playing Make Music New York.

EMILY LAURENCE
emily.laurence@metro.us

When the eight members of the mostly Colombian band M.A.K.U. Soundsystem get together to perform, the energy is infectious. From the percussion to the synth and horns, it's more of a party than a performance. The band will be playing Make Music New York for the second time this year and couldn't be more excited to take their sound to the streets. We catch up with vocalist Liliana Conde to get the scoop.

How did everyone in the band meet each other?

M.A.K.U. Soundsystem blends punk and Colombian music for a sound that's made for partying. ITZEL ALEJANDRA MARTINEZ

The majority of people in the band met through a series of Colombian and traditional percussion workshops that were taught at Teraza 7 Train Café, this really cool cultural spot in Jackson Heights. And I met everyone through a friend I went to high school with, Felipe Quiroz, who plays synth in the band.

Is everyone in the band Colombian?

Most of the people are, except for the two people in the horn section. Our trombone player is from Georgia and our sax and clarinet player is from the Bronx.

You guys played

It seems like the New York music community is really supportive of each other.

Yes! You get into situations sometimes where somebody is missing a pedal or somebody needs an extra cymbal stand, and in these moments people just come together to make the music happen. Someone will be like, "Here, borrow, my instruments." So that's really cool to see.

Make Music New York a couple years ago. What was it like?

It was amazing. We played at Joe's Pub and also near Astor Place. Traffic was closed off and there was a stage in the middle of the block. It was really, really fun just being able to bring music to the streets, which is what we love to do.

Obviously, the draw for concertgoers is that they get to hear music for free. What do you get out of the festival?

There are so many aspects of it that are exciting. I love the community-building. First, we get to create our own community within the band itself. We've created this family around music and it's really exciting bringing this music with a positive message to people. But we also get to meet and play with a lot of other musicians we admire, which is really cool.

M.A.K.U. Soundsystem will be performing for free on Sunday at 4 p.m. at Cave, home of Leimay in Williamsburg.

Letter to the editor

US needs to heal its wounds

How absolutely heart-breaking, sad and outrageous that a deranged white man murdered innocent black people in a church. It makes me want to cry and holler. My heart goes out to all who lost loved ones. I am sick and tired of racism, this disease that is destroying our country and world. I wish this was an isolated incident. However, when police, who are to protect and serve, kill innocent black people with impunity, and when black people face brutal and systematic discrimination and daily insults to their dignity, it creates a climate where black lives do not matter and violence flourishes. While most decent people will condemn this violence, our economic and social system is also culpable in creating the kind of racism this man expressed. This racial sickness is in all of us, even if we deeply oppose racism. The perpetrator is totally responsible. However, I cannot help but note that our society is imploding, with rampant poverty, hunger, illness and stress. There is not enough support to prevent people from exploding in violence. People like him attack those whose lives are not valued by the larger society. We need to do everything in our power to heal rampant racism, end the prison industrial complex, shut down hate groups, get rid of guns, and create economic, social and spiritual support for all our people.

Yanks are tough enough

MLB. In a baseball world filled with parity, the Yankees should be a playoff team this fall.

Derek Jeter is gone but the two biggest offensive threats from the 2009 World Series title team are currently playing as though six years have not passed.

Take a glance at the Yankees stat page on any sports website and you see the names Rodriguez and Teixeira at the top of nearly every important category.

A-Rod leads the team in batting average, at .279, and in OBP, at .379. Teixeira leads the club in home runs, 18, and RBIs, 48.

A-Rod and Teixeira have done an admirable job, so far, of making the Yankees look like the Yankees — simply in terms of star power and literal power. At shortstop, Didi Gregorius has had his issues in replacing the Legend. He's hitting just .232, the worst number of anyone on the Yankees not named Stephen Drew, and he's committed eight errors. Those "E's" are obviously magnified because of who he's replacing. But in fairness to Gregorius, there are eight MLB shortstops who have more errors this season.

Gregorius could at least approach the .256 batting average that Jeter

Alex Rodriguez has been a driving force in the Yankees' strong start to 2015. / GETTY IMAGES

The road ahead

The Yankees host the 34-32 Tigers this weekend.

- Adam Warren (4-4, 3.78 ERA) is slated to start for New York Friday.
- Masahiro Tanaka's scheduled Saturday start was pushed back to Sunday. Nathan Eovaldi or Bryan Mitchell will likely get the nod Saturday.

had last season, and in the month of June the 25-year-old is hitting .267, showing improvement at the plate.

"I think he's relaxed much more now than he was earlier in the season, I do," Yankees manager/prophet Joe Girardi said back on May 27. "And I think he's played much better on defense and I think he'll continue to improve."

There is a hesitation to call this a championship team, of course. It remains to be seen if A-Rod and Teixeira can keep this up and/or stay healthy (Teixeira's neck issue is worrisome at age 35) and Gregorius could go into another slump at a moment's notice.

But there is plenty of reason to believe, on a whole, that the Yankees can win a poor AL East. And once a team gets into the postseason these days, anything is possible.

Neither of last year's World Series representatives reached 90 regular season wins as the Giants had an 88-74 record and the Royals had an 89-73 mark.

More positive thinking: if the Yankees want an in-house comparison, they can see that the 2009 championship team had a 37-29 record on June 19 of that season. The 2015 bunch is just behind that pace at 35-30 on the year.

US women rest up

The United States women's soccer team will get the weekend off, but will open up Knockout Round action on Monday (8 p.m., Fox Sports 1) against Colombia. Colombia went 1-1-1 in its first three games, tying Mexico, beating France and losing to England.

MLB. Mets with big weekend in the ATL

The Mets (36-31) will be in Atlanta (32-34) this weekend to take on the Braves, a team below .500 but just 3.5 games behind the division-leading New Yorkers. The Mets took two-of-three from the Braves last weekend in Queens.

Jacob deGrom (7-4, 2.33 ERA) is slated to get the ball for the Mets Friday. Noah Syndergaard will get the ball Saturday night and Matt Harvey is scheduled to throw late afternoon Sunday. MATT BURKE

Lead paint poisoning affects over one million children today.

Learning disabilities, hearing loss, speech delays, violent behavior and, in rare cases, seizures and even death: these are just some of the effects lead paint poisoning has on young children. If your home was built before 1978, lead paint on your walls, doors, windows and sills may be dangerous. And it's not just large paint chips that can cause damage. In fact, three granules of lead dust are enough to poison your child. Let's make all kids lead-free kids. To learn more about the simple steps you can take to safeguard your family, log on to LEADFREEKIDS.org or call 800-424-LEAD.
